Japs Forced Into Retreat By Own Gas Shells

WIND DRIVES DEADLY FUMES ON NIPPONESE

Raid, Directed at Shanghai Front, 'Boomerangs' and Japanese Flee.

LOSE ON FIVE FRONTS

Battling Chinese Force Foes From Important Sectors on Soochow Creek.

SHANGHAI—(UP)—Japanese troops used gas on the Shanghai front today, a Chinese spokesman charged, but were driven back when an unfavorable wind blew it back into their lines.

The spokesman said the Japanese resorted to the use of gas in the Liuho sector, on the northwestern outskirts of Shanghai, but that the gas had "boomeranged."

Routed From Creek.

The Japanese were driven out from five points they had occupied on the south side of Soochow creek, the spokesman said. He admitted that a naval force had crossed at Chenchiatao, a mile west of the Toyado cotton mill on the western outskirts of the city.

Foreign military experts believed the Chinese had halted the Japanese advance south along the western fringe of the international settlement. The Japanese strove desperately to push their advance lines around the western side in an effort to encircle Shanghai.

A Japanese spokesman said Japanese units occupied positions along the south bank of Soochow creek before attempting a further push to the south.

Japanese authorities capitulated to a United States marine order for the return of a Chinese junk which they had taken during an invasion of the American defense sector.

The incident for a while threatened to become serious. U. S. marine officials refused to drop the matter because the first Japanese apology for the invasion had not been accompanied by the return of the junk. After a number of tense hours, the Japanese high command met all conditions and the incident was closed.

Extends Regrets.

Rear Admiral Denkiti Okoti, commander of a Japanese naval landing party, expressed Japan's regrets and his personal apologies to Maj. Gen. John C. Beaumont, the marine commandant.

The marines had announced they would forget the incident at 2 p. m. if the Japanese lived up to their promise to return the junk to the American defense sector on the western side of the settlement at that hour.

Promptly at 2 p. m. the marines passed a rope across Soochow creek to the Japanese lines. The junk was fastened to the rope and the marines pulled it back across the creek, officially ending the incident.

Freddie's 'Happy', Parents Refused Plea for Custody

LOS ANGELES — (AP)—Young Freddie Bartholomew, "very happy" because a superior court judge refused to return him to his parents, was his aunt "Cissie's" boy for keeps today.

"I would not care to go to my parents," the 13-year-old film star testified yesterday, "for, you see, they are practically perfect strangers to me. I am very happy with my aunt. I love her very much. She has been my mother since I was three years old."

Freddie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bartholomew, charged in their suit to break Miss Myllicent Bartholomew's guardianship that she had promised they could cancel the adoption within six months if they desired.

Miss Bartholomew charged the parents wanted to void the adoption so they could get more of Freddie's earnings.

"Aunt Cissie" adopted Freddie in June, 1936. She brought him here and got him started in the movies. Recently she helped him win a fight for more pay, so now he is earning $93,000 a year and she $4,000.

Mary Lee Williams

—International Ill. News Photo.—

Mary Lee Williams, 20, is back with her foster parents on the Williams farm near Springfield, Mo., heartbroken over discovery that the young man with whom she fell in love and married in September, Ben Yocum, 22, is really her brother. Eighteen years ago Mary was adopted by the Williams family from an orphan home in Jefferson City. At the same time her brother was adopted by a family who lived in another city, Mountain Grove. Last spring Yocum came to work as a farm hand on the Williams place, their romance bloomed and they were secretly married. It was when Yocum remarked to Mrs. Williams that his real name was Ipock that she recalled that was also her adopted daughter's real name, checked records at the orphanage and learned the truth. Yocum is continuing to live with the Williams and his sister, staying on as farm hand.

TENSION GROWS

Insurgent Blockade Increases Dangers In Mediterranean.

LONDON —(AP)—Mediterranean tension was heightened today by reports that Spain's insurgents were throwing a tight air and naval blockade along the entire Spanish coast to cut the Valencia government off from outside help by way of the high seas.

Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's strategy sharply increased the danger of international complications in the Mediterannean.

He was believed planning to rely largely on planes based on the Balearic island, Mallorca, to rule shipping lanes and cut off Valencia and Barcelona from food and munitions.

Franco's naval commander, Vice Admiral Francisco Moreno Fernandez, at Palma, Mallorca, had 35 ships at his command to build the sea blockade.

SCHOOLS FACE $37,000 CUT IN 1938 REVENUE

Board Approves Budget Draft Calling For $647,353 For Next Year's Operations.

HANDICAP 'NOT SERIOUS'

Miller Says Study Shows City Schools In Better Shape Than Most In State.

The Mansfield board of education last night approved a budget draft for 1938 which calls for $37,476 less than the schools had this year for operating expenses and bond retirement.

Prospective revenue for the year is approximately 4 per cent less than the schools received in 1937, but the cut will not seriously handicap the schools in their operation, provided the state department of education works out a solution to its financial problem before the next school term, Supt. W. L. Miller said.

Gets $684,000 This Year.

The new budget will give the schools $647,353 for 1938 as compared with $684,829 this year, with the general fund for next year set at $539,353 as compared with $557,600 in 1937.

The schools' financial outlook for the year came in for lengthy discussion by the board last night. A study of the picture showed the Mansfield schools in better condition than most of the other districts in the state.

Dr. John H. Bristor, clerk of the board, reported a general fund balance of $23,856 which will be increased by approximately $29,000 this week when the final distribution of the June real estate tax is made.

More Revenue In Sight.

The schools also have a promise from the state department of education of another allocation of funds under the foundation program about Nov. 30. The distribution will provide nearly $50,000 for the schools here but the amount mustt be used to pay off outstanding notes.

In addition, Supt. Miller said he obtained a promise on a recent trip to Columbus of $5,000 in state funds to apply on a $14,000 owed Mansfield schools for operation of the special classes for handicapped children.

With the state department of education burdened with a debt of almost $9,000,000, Supt. Miller predicted that many schools in the state would be forced to close next year unless the Ohio legislature and Gov. Martin L. Davey move to find a remedy for the situation.

GUNMEN SLAIN IN POSTOFFICE

Pair Trapped In Building as U. S., Michigan Officers Surround It, Open Fire.

PORT HURON, Mich.—(AP)—A squad of sheriff's deputies and postal inspectors shot it out with two men they trapped in the Smith's Creek postoffice today, killed both of them and blew the one-story frame building full of holes.

An alert village policeman, who sensed a postoffice holdup or burglary last Saturday, made the showdown possible.

Sheriff William Van Antwerp, who led the raiding party, said the dead men were Detroit hoodlums who had been under surveillance since Saturday.

He identified one as John Novak, alias Shorty Jack, 38. The other man was identified as Edward Scherer, Detroit.

The sheriff with three deputies and two postal inspectors gathered at Smith's Creek, a village near Port Huron, Sunday after Special Deputy Harry Neal, general store proprietor and only law enforcement officer in the village, reported the presence of two suspicious characters loitering at the postoffice.

They kept constant watch of the postoffice thereafter from the nearby hotel and jumped into action early this morning when two men with flashlights appeared at the rear of the postoffice, broke a window and entered.

A tear gas bomb was hurled inside and the intruders opened fire with pistols, shots which brought a raking volley from the officers.

The budget, reduced $3,000 under the amount allowed the city in 1937, calls for $247,093 for operating expenses, exclusive of bond retirement and interest.

RAGS, RICHES

Wanderer Begs Meal, Police Find He's Worth $25,000.

NORTH PLAINFIELD, N. J.—(AP)—His hunger satisfied by a feast his tale of woe won from a soft-hearted citizen, a 66-year-old wanderer dressed in rags sat in a police cell today worrying about his tobacco pouch crammed with $100 in coins and bills and bank books showing balances totaling $25,193.

Although the man said he was Sam Miller, Sergeant Ralph Farmer declared the bank books were in the name of William F. Beck whose last "permanent" home appeared to have been in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., about 25 years ago.

The shabbily-dressed man shuffled into police headquarters last night and asked for lodging. A witness in an auto accident case gave him money for a meal. The money was found by police in a routine search of his clothing.

'Phantom' Train Wrecks Car

HOPEWELL, Va. — (AP) — Rev. W. C. Buchanan's automobile was wrecked because of a train that never showed up.

Driving to church with his wife, he thought he heard an engine's whistle, got excited, stalled his car on the railroad tracks. The two leaped from the car, pushed it off the tracks, and sent it crashing into a telephone pole.

Then he looked for the train—but it never came along.

LABOR GROUPS UNITE IN CIVIL SERVICE FIGHT

CIO and A. F. of L. Pledge Support to City Employes, Call on Council Tonight.

Mansfield labor groups under separate banners of the CIO and A. F. of L. central bodies united today in their fight for the extension of civil service for city employes.

Pledging their full support to the Mansfield local No. 128 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, the 10 groups affiliated with the CIO central body said they would send three representatives to city council tonight to request an answer to the Trades council petition for civil service extension.

"We will give our 100 per cent co-operation to the city employes under the A. F. of L. banner in their fight to protect their jobs against the invasion of politics," Andrew Bishop, secretary of the CIO body, said today.

Delayed Endorsement.

"We withheld our open endorsement of the city workers' movement until the municipal campaign was over," Bishop explained, "because we didn't want to appear to favor any party in our stand."

The city workers' union and the Trades council last week announced a renewed drive to obtain civil service extension, saying "we don't want to be forced into politics to hold our jobs."

Both groups stated they would continue their fight regardless of the outcome of today's election.

"Our organization (CIO central body) will work with the Trades council in a concerted battle in behalf of organized labor in the city," Bishop said, "and possibly by the next municipal election will present a non-partisan labor ticket of our own."

22,000 GUARDS AT N. Y. ELECTION

Small Army Patrols Booths As Gotham Goes to Polls.

NEW YORK—(AP)—An army of anti-fraud election watchers, 22,600 strong, mobilized at polling places today as the vanguard of New York's 2,483,387 registered voters marked their choices in the mayoral contest between the incumbent, Fiorello H. La Guardia, Fusion candidate, and former State Supreme Court Justice Jeremiah T. Mahoney, the Democratic nominee.

Widespread talk of vote-stealing, aired by candidates of both camps in the five-borough election, led to the posting of 18,000 police, 3,500 special deputy attorneys-general and 1,100 volunteers, mostly lawyers, known as "Tom Dewey vigilantes."

Ten arrests in connection with the hotly-disputed election were recorded within three hours after the polls opened.

CHECK SHOWS 10,000 WILL VISIT POLLS

Less Than 15 Per Cent Vote During First Four Hours Booths Are Open.

ELECTION GOES SMOOTHLY

Board Receives No Reports of Irregularities; Polls Close at 6:30 P. M.

Mansfield went to the polls today—but it didn't march, it straggled.

Perhaps it was the weather—which was threatening most of the morning, with a slight rainfall, and perhaps it was the lack-luster campaign of both Democratic and Republican parties.

At any rate, less than 15 per cent of the registered voters in the city had cast their ballots during the first four hours the polls were open, a News-Journal check of 12 city precincts showed. And on that basis, it seemed that no more than 10,000 votes, only slightly more than half of the eligible voters, would participate in the selection of city, school and township officials and vote on the playground levy.

Weather May Help.

The News-Journal check showed 678 votes cast in 12 precincts, where the registration totals 4,546—less than 15 per cent. If the voting should maintain the same pace throughout the remaining eight hours the polls were open—the check was made at 10:30 a. m., with election day a third over—would be in the neighborhood of 9,000 votes, but [illegible] expected to vote after their day's work, it was expected that the vote would be about 10,000.

Banks closed at noon today, for a legal election half-holiday. The state liquor stores were closed all day, and retail spots were required to confine their sales to nothing more potent than 3.2 beer until 7:30—an hour after the polls close.

Election board officials reported that everything was going smoothly. They had no reports of illegularities, but had been called on to tell a number of voters where their precinct voting places were, they said.

Both Democratic and Republican headquarters had received similar calls.

Both Still Confident.

Supporters of both candidates for mayor—Democrat Claude M. Hunter and Republican Glenn L. Bierly — repeated their predictions of victory at today's polls. Bierly cast his callot at 8 a. m., but Hunter hadn't cast his at 11:30. He said he'd been "too

NAME CRAFTON

Directors of Retailers Pick Shoe Dealer as President.

C. M. Crafton, Main street shoe dealer, was elected president of the Mansfield Retail Merchants association at the annual meeting of the board of directors of the association last night at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Crafton succeeds J. A. Herbert, new business manager of the Ohio Public Service company who headed the organization for the last two years.

Other officers chosen were R. N. Calene, vice president; Louis A. Ott, re-elected treasurer and V. H. Lodde, re-appointed secretary.

SEEK SLASH IN UTILITY RATES

Rural Cooperatives Ask PUCO To Act in Power Fight.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Five rural electric cooperatives today petitioned the public utilities commission to order the Ohio Power Co. to show cause why it should not establish "reasonable wholesale rates" for current.

Progress has been stopped on the electrification plan until the cooperatives can obtain a satisfactory wholesale rate, the petition said.

"For years farmers have been denied electric service because utilities 'sought and served only the more profitable territory' and this company denies them a reasonable rate averaging one cent per kilowatt hour which has been ordered by other states," the petition said.

MARKS BALLOT AT 101

KENTON — (U.P.) — Hardin county's oldest voter today was J. Adam Orth, 101 years old, of Dunkirk. He said he has been supporting the Democratic ticket for 80 years. He cast a disabled voter's ballot because of failing health.

Flash! Democrats Lead---In Number of 'Taxis' Used to 'Get Out Vote'

They've Got 26, While Republicans Use 24 to Carry Voters.

If the number of automobiles in use as "taxis" to get the vote out has any significance, the Democrats ought to win—by a slight margin.

From Democratic campaign headquarters came word that 26 automobiles had been pressed into service to take voters to the polls.

The Republicans, on the other hand, had 24, they said—just two less than the Democrats.

With more cars at their command, the Democrats could carry more votes . . . but then perhaps the Republicans drove faster.

* * *

The weather gave both sides a break. Up to noon, it was a dull and dingy day, with a little rain. The kind of a day the Democrats are supposed to like. But at noon the weather changed, and was bright, warm and sunny. That's supposed to be Republican weather.

So on that issue, the thing was even.

* * *

Mayor Earl A. McFarland, who will turn his office over to either Claude M. Hunter, Democrat, or Glenn L. Bierly, Republican, on Jan. 1, took a hand in the business of getting out the vote today. He said he was so busy getting out the vote in his own precinct that he hadn't had time to vote himself. What vote was he getting out? You guess.

* * *

Candidate Bierly was one of the early birds in his precinct, which is 3-L. He voted at 8 a. m. However, Candidate Hunter, whose vote will cancel that of his opponent, hadn't found time to get over to 1-E at 11:30. But he wasn't figuring on missing.

* * *

Regardless of whether he is successful in today's election, Hunter has his heart set on a vacation the last of the week and he says he's going to take it. "I really started campaigning last January and I've been steadily at it ever since, so I think it's time for a little rest," he commented today. He and Mrs. Hunter will visit relatives in Pennsylvania and Virginia, returning home about Nov. 14.

* * *

Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, superintendent of Mansfield General hospital, and an early voter, nearly lost his vote by carelessly putting into his pocket a ballot he did not care to mark. The error was discovered by a precinct official, who immediately went to the hospital to get the lost ballot.

Mrs. Hahn Gets Respite From Murder Case Cross-Quiz

DENIES SHE GAVE POISON TO AGED MAN

Blond German Rests as Court Recesses For Election Day; Back on Stand Tomorrow.

CINCINNATI — (U.P.) — Anna Marie Hahn, 31-year-old German matron, won a day of rest today from the relentless cross-examination of Prosecutor Dudley M. Outcalt, who sought to prove that she had been a "blond Borgia" who poisoned four elderly men for their money.

Judge Charles S. Bell adjourned the trial until Wednesday after Mrs. Hahn told at a night session how she drove around Colorado Springs, Colo., looking at the "sceneries" with her 12-year-old son, Oscar, while her 67-year-old traveling companion was dying.

Gets Chance to Vote.

The recess was granted so the jury of 11 women and one man could vote in the municipal election.

George Obendoerfer, a cobbler, died in a Colorado Springs hospital Aug. 1, and the state contended that he had been poisoned by Mrs. Hahn. She was accused also of poisoning Jacob Wagner, 78, George Gsellman, 67, and Albert Palmer, 72. She vigorously denied having caused any of the deaths.

"I went out there on a vacation," she testified, referring to the Colorado Springs trip. "I didn't go to take care of anyone."

She denied that she had been accompanied also by an elderly man from Baltimore, "who was worth $100,000."

On direct examination by her attorney, Joseph Hoodin, Mrs. Hahn, speaking in a low voice with a marked German accent, said that she had tried to get Obendoerfer to a hospital when he became ill, and had insisted that he eat despite his protests that he had only $4.85 and didn't want to spent it. Hoodin asked if she had poisoned Obendoerfer.

"No, I never, never did that," she replied, wide-eyed. "Why, I never did such a thing in my life."

Denies Story of Witness.

Mrs. Hahn appeared distressed by the testimony of George Heis, who had been brought into court, pale and emaciated in a wheel chair, to charge that she had poisoned his food and beer, and had fed him spinach so sweet that "it tasted like it had sugar in it."

"I tried to be so good to him," the plainly-dressed defendant told the jury of 11 women and one man. "I felt so terrible about it."

She testified that she made pancakes for Heis because "he pined for home cooking," and denied that she ever "drank beer with him."

Earlier, after her son had testified in her defense, Mrs. Hahn admitted forging a $1,000 check with Wagner's name the day he died. She said he wanted her to have the money "to take care of everything."

FORECAST OF BUSINESS SLUMP THREATENS BUDGET BALANCING

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Government economists, reporting the current business recession will "run well into 1938," created a threat today to President Roosevelt's plans for a balanced budget.

If the forecast by the bureau of agricultural economics should prove accurate, it would jeopardize treasury hopes for increased revenue and make curtailment of expenditures more difficult.

Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he was counting on continued business improvement for this extra revenue and for curtailment of relief and other spending.

Revenue estimates, however, are based directly on calculations of national income. The farm economists predicted the steady rise in national income since 1933 would be broken by a drop next year below the 1937 total.

Only last week, while discussing the budget situation, the president expressed hope for great future increases in national income. He said it would rise from $65,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000 this year and later might continue upward to $90,000,000,000 or $100,000,000,000.

The forecast of the bureau of agricultural economics did not dispute this long-range prospect. Although it was rather pessimistic over the immediate future, it pictured business as in a "relatively short recession" and predicted conditions during the second half of next year would be "more favorable than in the first half."

But in making their usual fall estimate of business conditions to help farmers plan ahead, the agricultural economists minced no words in saying their analysis indicated the upswing of the business cycle has been "temporarily halted."

BOARD ORDERS SURVEY, VOTES $1,500 FOR JOB

Step First Taken In Plan to Relieve Congestion In City System.

The first step toward a proposed building program to alleviate crowded conditions in Mansfield elementary and junior high schools was taken last night by the board of education which authorized the expenditure of $1,500 for a building survey.

Voted at the suggestion of Supt. W. L. Miller who included a building plan in his five-year program for Mansfield schools, the amount will provide for the employment of a staff of workers under the direction of Dr. T. C. Holy of Ohio State university.

While Supt. Miller said the survey would serve its main purpose in showing where district shifts could be made to remedy crowded conditions, he added that it would be valuable should the board at any time in the future give serious consideration to a new building or any additions to present structures.

Will Take Four Months.

The survey would require about four months to complete and reports and recommendations will be submitted to the board not later than May 1, Miller said.

Included in the survey will be figures on the population growth of the city over the past 20 years to show exactly what building capacity is needed to accommodate the pupils.

He added that crowded condition in the Hedges, Western avenue, West Fifth street and Prospect schools might be remedied by changing the boundaries of some of the districts.

"The survey," he said, "will give us a definite plan before we begin making changes and show us where we can do the most good in bringing our program into realization."

Dr. Holy, who will conduct the survey, is director of educational research at Ohio State university. The funds will be used by Dr. Holy to employ helpers in making the survey, Supt. Miller explained.

GETS 45 YEARS

Captured Bird Brother Hears Sentence; Wife Held to Jury.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Frank Bird, a convicted killer, was under a 45-year federal prison sentence today and his wife, Sylvia, was bound over to the federal grand jury charged with aiding her husband, his brother Charles, and their companion, James Widmer, in escaping from the county jail Sept. 22.

Bird pleaded guilty before Judge Paul Jones in United States district court late yesterday to an indictment charging him with robbing a branch of the Central National bank of $18,836.

Mrs. Bird pleaded guilty to the charge of aiding and abetting the Birds and Widmer in their jail break and not guilty to seven other counts charging her with being accessory after the fact in the bank robberies committed by the trio.

Widmer was captured recently in Philadelphia, leaving only Charles Bird at large.

LIQUOR PROFITS HIT $6,618,000

Ohio Sales For Year Amount to $44,635,878; Auditor Raps Excess Stocks.

COLUMBUS — (U.P.)—Profits of the state liquor stores for the year 1936 amounted to $6,618,298.56, according to an audit report filed today with State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson by State Examiner Joseph I. Blamert.

Liquor sales during the year ended Dec. 26, 1936, amounted to $44,635,878, this figure including $6,252,713 in liquor gallonage taxes included in the selling price.

Cost to the state of liquor during the year was $28,568,925, according to the report, and total expenses of the monopoly system were $32,183,199, including liquor costs.

Operating expenses of the department were $3,578,835 compared to $2,769,801 for 1935.

Criticizing the carrying of excessive liquor stocks, the report pointed out that although department officials have said that a three weeks' supply of liquor is adequate, making possible approximately 17 turnovers a year, the department's inventory disclosed that approximately five weeks stock is being carried at all times.

More money would have been available for old age pensions, had it not been for this excessive investment in liquor stocks, the report said.

The report also asserted that an excessive amount of liquor was in the hands of state agencies, pointing out that these contract outlets had stocks inventories at $694,149, although their individual contracts authorized a total maximum stock of only $291,500.

The department was criticized for issuing more D-3 permits for sale of liquor by the glass than authorized by the liquor control act limiting these permits on a basis of population within counties, villages and cities.

POSTAL CLERK HELD IN THEFT

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—A 39-year-old mail clerk who federal authorities said admitted escaping prison 17 years ago while serving a term for murder was behind bars again today—tripped by an alleged $10 theft.

Assistant U. S District Attorney Valentine Hammeck said John Howe, father of four children, told him he was convicted of second degree murder in New Mexico in 1915. Howe escaped prison in 1920, Hammeck said he related.

Howe was arrested yesterday when Chief Postal Inspector Charles Pfaffenberger accused him of opening a letter and taking $10.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

Presidential Strategy.

ONE OF THE things upon which Mr. Roosevelt prides himself is his ability to keep "in line" for him personally men of sharply conflicting views and wholly different outlooks. It involves a certain shiftiness upon his part but undoubtedly it is one of his gifts, from the exercise of which he derives considerable enjoyment.

For example, more than once he has moved in one direction and yet persuaded intimate friends, who had been practically promised he would go in the other direction, that nevertheless his heart is in the right place and it was only a question of time before he turned around. The presidential disposition is to regard this sort of thing as "strategy" essential for the advancement of his "objectives." To others it has seemed merely the old game of playing both ends against the middle, by which he first makes boobs of one set of his advisers and, second, of the other.

* * *

IN DOING THIS Mr. Roosevelt is not deliberately deceitful. On the contrary, it is natural for him to try to hold to both elements around him and he very often persuades himself as he persuades others. It is the kind of thing, however, which justifies observers of the Roosevelt character and students of his strategy in contending that his convictions are not very strong, his mind not very clear and in the matter of political philosophy he is neither a real liberal nor a true conservative, but essentially an opportunist, prone to do the expedient thing in a jam.

* * *

IN THE EARLY days of his first administration he was so charmed by the colorful pictures painted by the national planners of the Tugwell type that he repudiated his own publicly proclaimed and entirely sound views on federal finance and embarked upon a series of immensely costly and, in the main, cockeyed experiments. To those who pointed out the fiscal dangers and the economic unsoundness the Roosevelt argument was that he had not changed his convictions, but that it was necessary to go in this direction "to prevent revolution," and unless he placated the radicals there would be great trouble in the country.

* * *

IT WAS NOT true that he convinced some ,scared others and managed through years of extravagant experimentation to persuade his business men friends that once the emergency was over he would "return to the ways of sanity." More than once, and without publicity, he turned to these to extricate him from a confusion in which practically everybody had lost their bearings. Now he is in trouble again. A business slump has taken place. His boom has disappeared. A depression looms and inside his administration some of the most cocksure of the New Dealers are chastened and chagrined.

* * *

AT HYDE PARK and Washington the president has sent again for various conservative friends, business men, publishers, economists and "economic royalists," some of whom have been "in the dog house" since the election. There have been long and solemn conferences from which all with even a slight radical tinge have been excluded. From these conferences the conservatives emerged, convinced that the president intends to adopt the necessary remedies to restore solvency and avoid disaster. He is going to really balance the budget, instead of just talking about it. He is going to repeal the surplus tax and modify the capital gains. He will drop all radical proposals, reinstate the multiplication table in the treasury and get back to fundamentals.

* * *

THAT IS THE idea and that is the frame of mind in which the president now is. The best proof is the way in which he is now dealing with his extreme liberal advisers. They are now getting what the conservatives got for so long. To them he explains that the support of these business men and publishers is essential to tide over the existing situation, and his advocacy of these measures urged by business cannot be avoided. This, however, does not mean that he has changed at heart. On the contrary, once the present crisis is past he will drive ahead toward his national planning goals harder than ever.

* * *

EVIDENCE that this is the argument now used to keep the radicals in line while he turns toward conservatism is had in the emanations of various left-wing supporting organs and inspired interpreters who think budget balancing nonsense, deficits splendid and inflation something greatly to be desired. It would be amusing if it were not so serious. There is not much doubt that for a while, anyhow, Mr. Roosevelt, counting upon his radical friends to "understand," will proceed along conservative lines. If, however, there is any improvement in the basic conditions which have frightened him, it will not go far nor last long because the other direcoion is the one he likes most to travel and the radicals are to him the more congenial traveling companions.

* * *

HE DOES NOT LIKE — and never did—the multiplication table. For a while he will wrestle with the stern necessities of the budget, but it is a drab and gloomy task which he will drop as quickly as he can, "in order to keep down a revolution." At least, that is what he has consistently done in the past. It is phoney stuff, and it is neither pleasant nor reassuring to see a president so adept at dishing it out.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—George Lynn is an actor and playwright, but what makes him unusual is the fact that he's the town's only authority on life under the "O."

Some years back a real estate development in the Hollywood hills erected a huge sign, spelling out Hollywoodland, visible all over the movie city.

For three weeks, George Lynn made his home under the "O." He isn't superstitious, or he doesn't know roulette, or he'd have chosen the "double-O."

* * *

College graduate and stunt pilot, George was ready to leave for China and aviation exploits there when someone decamped with all his funds. That was five years ago. He had $2 in his pocket and nothing to do—except go to dinner with friends in Hollywoodland. They didn't invite him to spend the night, and on the way down the hill he saw the sign. The "O" looked pleasant. He camped.

"It wasn't bad living," he said on the "Charlie Chan" set the other day. "I'd go down to gas stations to wash up and shave—I still had a small kit—and you can buy bushels of raw vegetables for a quarter. I ate them."

* * *

After a bit of this he made his way home to Cumberland, Md.—he hadn't wanted to bother the folks—and made a fresh start. He had sold stuff to magazines, and had appeared in about 30 plays at the Pasadena playhouse before Hollywood noticed him. Since then he's done seven pictures—usually getting killed off before the end.

"Sort of a gruesome career," he said, "but I like character stuff—and characters get killed, at least when I play them."

About two years after George made his home under the "O" a pretty young actress found the same Hollywoodland sign the answer to her problems. She leaped off the top of one of the letters to her death. A movie would have had George there at the time, to save her life....But the scenario didn't read that way.

The Dick Powells believe in planned domesticity. They plan as much as a month ahead what they will do. The schedule includes staying home at least three nights of each week, working or not. When both Dick and Joan Blondell work, they go out socially only once a week. When one works, they compromise on two nights out and five by the fire. They invite dinner guests not more than two nights each week. They allow themselves one very late engagement—at home or elsewhere—each month, and at least four mornings a month when they can sleep as late as they please.

The schedule, says Joan, is for health and happiness.

"If we don't plan ahead like this we find ourselves going out more and more often, having more and more parties at our house and getting more and more tired out."

Tells of Herbs At Round Table

An interesting paper on herbs was read by Mrs. R. G Averill before members of the Round Table club yesterday when Mrs Lois Tappan entertained the group at the Women's Club.

Mrs. Averill told of the uses and growth of American herbs and illustrated her paper with a chart which showed the locality in which each herb was found. An interesting point brought out was that old fashioned herb gardens are being revived in this country.

The meeting was conducted by Mrs. C. C. Wagner, vice president. When refreshments were served Mrs. W. J Tappan and Mrs. Milton Sheets, Gibsonburg, a charter member of the organization, presided. A bowl of bronze chrysantemums was used as a centerpiece

Popular Color

BLACK, WHICH is the big favorite in costumes generally, and that means coats, too, has its rivals for satorial honors. And the rivals that probably come nearest to black in the race for favors are the very light shades—tans, grays, beiges.

One of these light colors is shown, an apricot beige colored with Persian lamb. This smart imported woolen coat makes a striking contrast as part of a costume and worn over the suit's dress, an all black silk crepe. The coat is lined with the same crepe as the dress, and the dress has elaborate clips worn at the neckband.

P-T COUNCIL PRESENTS EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM

Indian Drama and Pageant With Broadway Players Will Be Staged at Senior High Auditorium Thursday for School Children.

WHEN the Council of Parent-Teacher Associations presents the Hopi Indian drama, "Reward of the Sun God," to the school children of Mansfield Thursday, it will be the second child education entertainment from Junior Programs, Inc., New York, that has been brought to this city by the council.

The annual presentations of nationally-known shows is a part of the Council's program to educate parents, as well as children, to the value of proper and supervised entertainment for children.

"Reward of the Sun God" will bring to Mansfield children a colorful and authentic picture of the Hopi Indian tribe, of their customs, costumes, abodes and their music. It was written by John Lou Nelson, noted Indian authority and author of the popular current book "Rhythm for Rain." He lived with the tribe for a number of months, and heard their tribal history from the older men and women

The cast of players who are seen in the play are from the New York playhouses It is staged in three acts, the first of which is an abode village high on a mesa, where the little Hopi boy and girl live; the second is the Land of the Shadow Springs, and the third act goes back to the mesa

* * *

The presentation of such a play is not for the moment's entertainment only, according to Mrs. D. O. Meese, president of the Council, but provides an educational subject for school study which correlates history, geography, music, poetry, art, folk dancing and many other subjects.

Teachers in Mansfield schools who are devoting regular study periods to the Hopi Indian background, are Miss Bertha Patterson, Miss Emma Waring and J. Merton Holcombe, at Senior High school; Miss Fae Sotherland, and Miss Helen Herring, John Simpson Junior high; Miss Virginia Stark, Hedges Junior high; Miss Florence Robinson, supervisor of art, and Miss Helen Hartman, supervisor of rhythm and music in the elementary grades.

The work done by Mansfield school children last year in "Pinocchio," the first Junior Programs presentation in this city, was so outstanding that the New York bureau asked permission to use the music that was done under the direction of Miss Hartman's pupils, thep oems and essays supervised by Mrs. Mildred Roberts, and the art work done by Miss Robinson's pupils, in its national publicity.

* * *

Two presentations of "Reward of the Sun God" will be given Thursday at Senior High auditorium; one at 10 a. m. for primary and elementary grades, and another at 2.30 p. m. for junior and senior high school students.

The entertainment is made possible through the co-operation of parents and teachers and a group of sponsors. The sponsors for this year's play are:

DR. HUGHES DISCUSSES MUSIC APPRECIATION

Dean of Music at Ohio State University Is Interesting Speaker When Music Study Club Entertains Other Clubs.

BEFORE an enthusiastic audience of 75 people Dr. Royal D. Hughes, dean of music at Ohio State university, gave an interesting lecture on music appreciation last evening with Mrs. Marie Marks Porterfield assisting at the piano when the Mansfield Music Study club was hostess to members of the Loudonville and Bellville Music clubs at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

In his address Dr. Hughes followed the modern trends of thought that a musical composition holds for each person whatever he has been educated to hear in that piece. He told that one learned more about a composer from his music than from the history of his life.

He pointed out the various elements which a composition may have and Mrs. Porterfield played selections illustrating these elements. Her numbers included: "Aufschwung" by Schumann, "Fugue, B Flat Minor" by Bach, the first movement of the "Moonlight Sonata" by Beethoven, "Gavotte en Musette" by d'Albert, "Nocturne E Flat, Opus 9, No. 2" by Chopin, "Submerged Cathedral" by Debussy and "Rhapsody G. Minor" by Brahms.

Preceding the evening meeting a dinner honoring Dr. and Mrs. Hughes was given at the hotel by the executive board and committee chairmen of the organization. Among the guests present was Mrs. E B Fuller, Loudonville, district president of the federation.

The next regular meeting will be Dec. 6 at the hotel at which time a Christmas program will be presented under the direction of Miss Florence MacDonald. The study group will meet Nov. 22 with Mrs. William K. Mackey as hostess.

Woman Finds Married Man Is Untrue

By VIRGINIA LEE

UNHAPPY BABS is unhappy because she is another of those women who thought HER affair with a married man would be "different." It is an odd thing that no matter how brilliant persons are in the ordinary affairs of life, they always think the rules of the game don't hold in their love affairs.

Not so long ago a girl who had been acting the third party in the familiar triangle said to me, "But you wouldn't want to hold a husband who no longer cared for you, would you?" I said no, but I thought how typical that query was of the third woman who felt because she loved someone's husband, and his wife, she was told, "misunderstood" him, said wife should step aside and let the other woman have him.

Well, to go on with Bab's story. She is a widow and feels she is not at all to blame for the affair. The man came to her, and Babs had no idea he cared for her. She was lonely, but always tried to find legitimate ways to banish it. At first she resented this man's attentions, knowing he was married. But he kept coming to see her, and she learned to love him very much.

Now she finds that his love for her apparently has cooled and he has other girl friends "He is a man who can give a good line," she says, "and is a liar. I think he wants me to give him up. I may be wrong. He doesn't have the nerve to do it himself

"I hope my letter will help some other women victims of married men."

I hope it will, Babs, but I am afraid it won't. It is the same old story. It is a temptation, I know, when a woman is lonely, to believe in the love of a man who seems so sincere and so attracted to you. But the only safe rule, ever, is to steer clear of married men who make love to you.

Once in a blue moon there is a man who truly is unhappy and mismated and he really cares deeply for some one else. But, then, if it is at all possible (meaning, largely, if he has no children) to be honorable, he should free himself before he allows himself to make love to another woman.

And any woman so approached should think of the wife first of all, and how she must feel about a faithless husband After all, how can a woman have faith in a man who is faithless to his marriage vows? If she allows him to make love to her, she involves herself in a mass of deceit and underhand conduct that cannot help lowering her character, no matter how much she feels she is justified in her clandestine affair.

Why don't you take the initiative and break off this affair, Babs? Don't wait for him to make a move. Even if you feel lonely again, your conscience will be clear and you can look the world in the face again.

Personal Daintiness Is Essential

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

IN QUEEN ELIZABETH'S day, women had a rather unique way of keeping themselves fragrant. The English belle of that era carried about with her a small metal ball filled with sweet-smelling herbs or dried flower petals. And the purpose of this was to imbue the body with the fragrance that emanated from the ball, and thus cover up any unpleasant body odors!

Of course, women today know that perfumes really do not cover up body odors to any appreciable degree, but what a good many of us do not seem to realize is that odorous perspiration often proves more of a problem in winter than in summer. The heavy woolen garments we wear keep the hair from the skin, and do not permit free evaporation of the moisture exuded through the pores. As a consequence, the perspiratory glands fail to function properly.

Another reason why perspiration odors should be guarded against very carefully in winter, is because heavy woolen garments tend to retain such odors more tenaciously than frocks of lighter fabrics. Dress shields should be worn in heavy frocks, and should be changed daily. And it is a good idea to dust the shields occasionally with a good deodorant powder.

A good many women also don't seem to realize that odorous perspiration may be due to internal disorders. Of course I always prescribe the use of deodorants, dusting powders and like external applications for combating body odors. They are most effective and no woman should be without them, if she wishes to retain her natural daintiness. But in my opinion, to correct such a condition thoroughly, internal treatments are also required, for often, faulty elimination is responsible for obnoxious perspiration.

If the wastes of the system are not eliminated in the normal way, the blood is obliged to free itself of them in some other manner. As a result, they are excreted through the skin. The retention of waste in the bowels leads to absortion of the decayed material in the system, and to the eventual throwing off of an unpleasant odor through the pores of the body.

Since constipation is a cause of body odor, correction of the condition is essential in addition to the use of deodorants Copious amounts of water should be consumed daily so that the wastes are thoroughly cleansed from the system The diet should contain plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, in order to provide roughage. And specialized exercises should be practiced to strengthen the muscles.

Gland Over-Active.

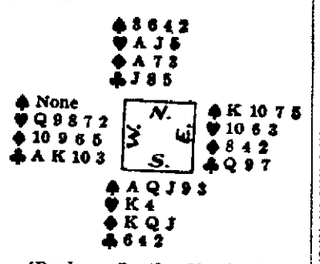
As I said before, the need for combatting perspiration odor is just as important in winter as it is in summer, for the perspiratory glands are just as likely to become over-active. And heavy clothing tends to complicate the problem. Frequent baths and changes of clothing, are essential, and a good deodorant should be employed to assist in keeping the body fresh and fragrant.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKING A NEW ENTRY

Sometimes an apparently unnecessary finesse must be taken in order to create an extra entry to take a finesse in a different suit which is utterly obligatory. In other words, finesses are not merely for the purpose of shutting out some winning card held by the opposition. They are also for the purpose of building extra entries into a hand.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

North and South reached a contract of 4-Spades on this deal after an opening bid of 1-Spade by South. 2-Spades by North, three by South and four by North.

The club K was West's opening lead, followed by the A and then a small one to East's Q, in response to East's signals. It was now up to the declarer to cash. This seemed a simple matter after the return of the diamond 8, which was won in the dummy with the A, until the first lead of trumps indicated that East held four. Declarer led to the heart A and finessed the trump 9, but was obliged to give up one trump trick.

There was one more possible entry in dummy, which South should have used, and that was to try the finesse of the heart J. Even if that had failed, it was worth trying, as the contract was set otherwise and there was a 50-50 chance that the heart J would hold. In that event the heart K, overtaken with the heart A, would have provided the third needed entry, and the contract would have been made.

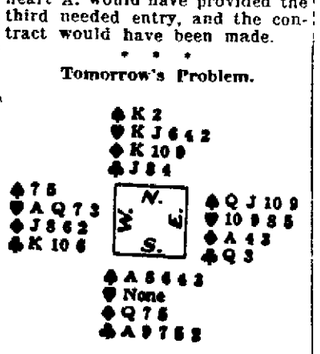
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is the correct bidding of this deal?

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"COME IN!" my mother-in-law called in her usual imperious manner when I knocked at the door of her room after I had changed from motoring clothes to negligee attire. But when I opened the door she greeted me with a cordial smile from her bed, where, already gowned for the night, she was propped up with pillows.

"I thought I might as well get ready for bed, even if I'm not a bit sleepy," she said, and I wondered if she thought I really believed the hoary fiction which she always utters when she goes to her room directly after dinner.

"That's what I like to do," I agreed heartily. "If one is going to read in bed, it is so nice to drop the book and snap the light off without any extra movements."

Alarmed Over Mary.

"Quite," she said, in the English fashion she occasionally affects to our great delight, and then she gestured toward a low chair.

"Draw that chair up here," she commanded, indicating a position where our faces would be directly opposite each other, "and tell me what's on your mind. You said you wanted to talk to me."

"I do," I said when I had obeyed her, "but I don't know just how to begin. I'm afraid you won't like what I've done, but it seemed the only way for Mary."

"For Mary?" she repeated in quick alarm for the granddaughter she idolizes. "What's the matter with Mary?"

"Nothing, now, I hope," I said quickly. "But there might be something radically wrong with her happiness if things were permitted to go along as they were."

She suddenly sat up straight, disdaining the support of her pillows.

"Tell me this minute what you mean," she commanded. "Don't beat about the bush any longer."

"It's her father-in-law again," I began.

Madge Tells Story.

"Drat that man, anyway!" she interrupted. "If ever there were a snake in the grass, he's it. He's so crooked he'll have to have somebody put him into his coffin with a corkscrew."

I laughed dutifully at the ancient quip, and she smiled wryly.

"Go on," she said, and for the second time since returning home, I told the story of the strenuous program which Philip Veritzen had outlined for her beloved granddaughter.

Unlike my father, she did not listen in silence, but interrupted me frequently with questions and with ejaculations of indignation. I had not finished when she gave me the opportunity for breaking my news, which I needed so sorely.

Realizes Danger.

"But, Margaret," she said, when I had told her of Philip Veritzen's wish to have Princess Olina assist Noel in his operetta, "don't you see what that means? Mary will be in New York, and Noel will be thrown constantly with Olina It looks to me as if that old hyena were at his old tricks again, trying to break up that match. I don't know but it would be the best thing after all," she finished. "I like Noel, but he'll never measure up to Mary, and if she has to have that old father-in-law raising Cain with her all the time, she'd better get out."

"That may have to be the ultimate solution." I said with hasty evasion, knowing the danger of flatly contradicting any opinion of hers. "But that doesn't help matters now. And I don't want Mary upset for her rehearsals. It will be bad enough for her to be separated from Noel."

Opening for Madge.

"That won't hurt her," Mary's grandmother commented caustically, "but I agree with you that having her husband studying music with a pretty girl—and a romantic princess, to boot—isn't going to be particula ly soothing for her. But I don't see what you can do about it, unless you kidnap Olina and get her out of the way."

I laughed in embarrassed fashion.

"Queer you should say that," I said, trying to infuse my words and manner with mystery.

"Why?" she demanded bluntly.

"Because," I answered, "I haven't exactly planned to kidnap Olina, but I have asked her and her mother, the queen, to visit us here at the farm for a while. They are really in quite dire straits, and Queen Olga was most grateful for what she called my offer of sanctuary."

A day of disruption, commotion and rather adverse conditions is forecast from the prevailing planetary influences. Employment seems at stake, with rivalry, enmity and false reports making things disagreeable. This may cause one to make an abrupt and hazardous change. With caution, consideration and sagacity, this condition may be transformed into a profitable situation, but be careful with strangers and untried ventures. Private affairs should move pleasantly.

Those whose birthday it is face a change in their affairs abruptly brought about by their own restlessness and peculiar urges. With sagacity and forethought, this adverse situation may be turned to profit, but be cautious with strangers and untried propositions

For Double-Quick Cough Relief, Mix This at Home
Better Than Ready-Made Medicines. Easily Mixed.
Here's an old home remedy your mother used, but, for real results, it is still the best thing ever known for coughs that start from colds. Try it once, and you'll swear by it.
It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed—a child could do it.
Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of actually better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for four times the money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.
And there is positively nothing like it for quick action. You can feel it take hold instantly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes, and helps clear the air passages. No cough remedy, at any price, could be more effective.
Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

THEATER

Film Version Censored.

When Sam Goldwyn decided to make a picture of the stage drama "Dead End," he knew that he could never find child screen players to replace the ones who had made such tremendous impressions in the stage version, so he brought the entire lot to Hollywood—six of them. And then the trouble started. The boys were so letter perfect in their lines that they could say them automatically, and when it came to the profanity and obscenities that they had used on the stage, they just naturally forgot and yelled them into the loud speaker—and the scenes had to be taken over again. None of the boys—the oldest is 15—could understand why stage audiences can hear "bad words" that screen audiences can't. "Dead End" is a sombre, dramatic sketch of life, with Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart and Allen Jenkins. At the Ohio.

Two New Dances.

Shirley Temple's small feet dance two new types of steps in her picture "Heidi," current attraction at the Madison. Given a pair of wooden shoes by her grandfather, the little mountain girl falls asleep and in her dreams her new shoes carry her away to a Cinderella ball where she dances a minuet with a Prince Charming, and again they carry her to the Zuyder Zee in Holland where she dances a wooden shoe tap dance with a chorus of little Dutch girls. This set depicts windmills along the dyke and is one of the largest sets in which the small star has ever appeared. She is supported by Jean Hersholt as the embittered grandfather living high in the Alps.

Highland Romance.

Rough and ready romance in the heart of the Northwest salmon fishing country is brought to the Majestic screen in "The Lady Fights Back." Kent Taylor, young engineeer arrives at the Muskalago river to build a dam and meets the pretty manager (Irene Hervey (of the exclusive salmon fishing club. The dam will mean the end of the salmon fishing and of the club and so the manager exerts all of her feminine wiles to stop it. Besides charm, she uses methods that are little short of gangsterism, but it ends happily with both the dam and the club intact. The picture is based on the novel "Heather of The Highlands." "Love Is On The Air" is the second feature.

Intriguing Situation.

A British garrison trapped in Arabia, with an old airplane their only chance of being saved from massacre. It must be used to drop bombs on a dam, but it can only carry the bombs and fuel for one way. The man who flies it can not come back. Two men only in the garrison can fly the plane, and both are in love with the same woman. This is the intriguing situation in "Another Dawn" at the Ritz, with Kay Frances, Errol Flyn and Ian Hunter. Rounding out the two feature program is the hilarious comedy, "Easy Living" with Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold and Ray Milland.

Leftover fish can be made into a dozen good dishes, so it is more economical to buy a good-sized whole fish and to make it last for two days, rather than to buy a small fish that is just enough.

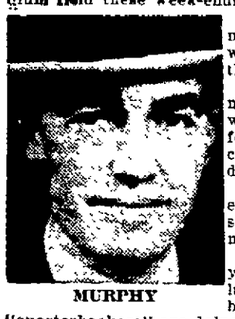
Murphy, Tygermen Deserve Orchids

Majority Are Loyal to Mansfield High Eleven, But There Are Plenty of Knockers, Too; Team Compiles Fine Record.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

DOES Mansfield really appreciate the type of football the current edition of Mansfield high school is providing out there at Stadium field these week-ends? Frankly, we doubt it.



MURPHY

We do not question the loyalty of the majority of the few thousand followers which patronize the games regularly, but there exists a critical minority.

Fortunately, the minority consists mainly of "Drug Store Quarterbacks," who, we find, go elsewhere to see their football games, but are quite loud in their criticism of what occurs out there at Stadium field on their return.

These conditions probably exist in every city, but it has been several years since Mansfield has heard criticism of this nature as often as it has this year.

Perhaps its is more noticeable this year because one expects to hear the team lauded rather than constantly "panned," but whether this is a fact or not, the "quarterbackers" are doing a lot of huffing and puffing—and in most instances—about something they don't know anything about.

Coach Russ Murphy has been criticized severely in some quarters. Why? Well, they just don't seem to know, but, nevertheless, they continue their criticism of his coaching methods.

In view of what the team has accomplished under the leadership of Murphy this year, the criticism is very, very unfair.

* * *

Only One Defeat Mars Record.

THE present team is one of the greatest ever to represent the school. It's record has been blotted by a defeat, it is true, but how often does a team go through a season unscatched. Very few, indeed. All football teams have their "off" days. They are beaten by inferior opponents. Defeats are not rare when a team tackles a formidable schedule such as the Tygers did this year.

It really hurts to lose a game to a team which the home town boys should probably have beaten by several touchdowns, but these "upsets" occur Saturday after Saturday, and they will continue to happen as long as football is played.

One hears frequently of the defeat suffered by the Tygers in the game with Sandusky. The dissatisfied minority prefers to dwell on this game. It forgets the accomplishments.

Less fuss has been made over the victories and ties than the defeat by the Blue Streaks. However, the margin of victory in several games has also come in for criticism.

Let's take the game with the Western Reserve freshmen as an example of what some self-alleged experts know about football.

Judging from the size of the crowd, the "experts" stayed at home—to save 50 cents. They considered the game a setup for Mansfield.

Why they should consider this game a "breather" is beyond explanation.

The freshmen team came to Mansfield boasting an all-star high school lineup. It consisted of players tested in several years of scholastic ball. The players were the class of what Western Reserve regards as one of the finest freshmen squads ever assembled at the school.

The freshmen were more experienced than the Tygers and heavier by pounds and pounds, but these odds were insufficient to convince some that the visitors would be difficult to topple.

Well, to make a long story short, the freshmen formed the toughest team Mansfield tackled this year. It was tougher than Massillon, Sandusky, or Erie, Pa., Strong Vincent, and yet the Tygers rose to the heights to win

But how many persons did you see celebrating the victory. Not many, we can assure you. They were disappointed because Mansfield did not win by a bigger score.

* * *

Whipped West, One of Akron's Best.

THE fact that Mansfield accomplished a hurculean feat in disposing of the freshmen has been cited. What about the other foes?

Well, Mansfield defeated Akron West in the opener. West is now making a gallant fight to retain the city championship. The Tygers held Massillon to a tie. Massillon has lost only one game The one touchdown defeat was administered by New Castle with three of the Massillon regulars on the sidelines

Strong Vincent was more formidable than the majority will confess, and Mansfield should have won. Strong Vincent merely caught Mansfield in a "letdown" after the Massillon game the Tygers had pointed since the start of the season

Mansfield defeated Wooster with a second-string lineup It lost to Sandusky, a team which was "up" while Mansfield was down. But Sandusky is considerably stronger than Tyger followers believed. It has proven it since

Murphy used a second-string lineup during most of the game with the inspired Shelby Whippets

Now we ask, what more can a football team do for a coach? Let's be fair about this thing, and give credit where credit is due. After all, Murphy and his ball players probably know more about what to do on the football field than all of the knockers put together.

Harry Cooper Leading Money Winner.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Although Harry Cooper of Chicago, famous as golf's also-ran, couldn't win either of the major titles open to American professionals—the open and the P. G. A. championships—he has just about gained a stranglehold on all the rest of the year's honors.

In the latest statistics released from the P. G. A. tournament bureau, Cooper is shown as the leading money winner of the year from Jan. 1 to Nov. 1, the leading point scorer toward the P. G. A. trophy and the holder of the lowest scoring average through the tournament season.

BARBERS AGAIN HIGH

The Oscar Walters Barbers again set the pace for the Commercial Class C league team at the Meder alleys last night. The Barbers compiled a 2533 total. Individual scoring was led by Brollier of the Barbers, who spilled 561 pins.

COMEBACK TRY FAILS

Joe Sekyra, Former Heavyweight Contender, Halted by Burman.

DAYTON—(AP)—The comeback attempt of Joe Sekyra, Dayton boxer who once was a top-flight contender for the heavyweight championship, had been halted here today. Sekyra was knocked out in the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night by "Red" Burman, hard hitting protege of Jack Dempsey.

In the co-feature of the program, Harry Jeffra, world's former bantamweight champion, gained a ten-round decision over Biff Lennon, Hartford, Conn., in an overweight bout.

GEHRINGER HONORED

CHARLEY GEHRINGER

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK—(AP)—Charley Gehringer was named by the Baseball Writers' association today as the American league's "most valuable player" for 1937, thereby climaxing the biggest season of his 14-year career with the game's most cherished award.

At an age when many players are on the way down—and out, the Detroit Tigers "strong silent man" thus found his 34th year, already marked by the league batting championship, topped off by two much sough-after goals.

Margin Four Points.

Although his margin of victory in the writers' poll was only four points over Joe Dimaggio, deadpan dynamiter of the world champion New York Yankees Gehringer nevertheless came within two points of a "perfect" score in the balloting.

Third member of the Detroit clan to win the award since the baseball writers first presented it in 1931, Gehringer was selected for the brilliant all-round play that has made him today the standout second baseman in the American league, if not in the game.

Only twice has he fallen below the .300 batting mark since becoming a regular in 1926. He hit for .356 in 1934, .354 in 1936, and last season clouted at a merry .369 pace, best in both major leagues. His lifetime average is .329 over his 14 seasons.

Third Tiger to Win.

Gehringer is the third member of the Tiger clan to win the honor. Before Greenberg drew it in 1935, Cochrane received the award in 1934 for his great leadership. Gehrig was last year's winner.

The list of those drawing one or more votes: Gehringer, Detroit, 78; Dimaggio, New York, 74; Greenberg, Detroit, 48; Gehrig, New York, 42; Sewell, Chicago, 22; Dickey, New York, 22; Cronin Boston, 19; Ruffing, New York, 18; Gomez, New York, 14; Kreevich, Chicago, 13; Travis, Washington, 12; Moses, Philadelphia, 12; Allen, Cleveland, 11; Clift, St. Louis, 11; Radcliff, Chicago, 10; Lewis, Washington, 7; Appling, Chicago, 5; Bell, St. Louis, 5; Averill, Cleveland, 4, Lary, Cleveland, 4; Lawson, Detroit, 4; Walker, Detroit, 3; York, Detroit, 1; Fox, Detroit, 1.

Stratton, Rubi Win Elimination Bouts

Defeat Schultz, Wagner, Respectively, In Quality Club's Opening Show at Armory.

EXPONENTS of the grunt and groan art swept back in the limelight on Mansfield's sport front last night when Tim Nolan's Quality club presented an interesting three-match program at the Armory.

An enthusiastic reception was accorded the grapplers as they inaugurated the light-heavyweight elimination tournament that will provide a large share of fireworks for shows this fall and winter.

Walter Stratton, the crafty Warren, O., artist, who Thursday night will meet the Great Mephisto, world's light-heavyweight champion in a title bout at Columbus, and Bert Rubi, clever Hungarian toe twister, registered the opening round tourney victories.

Wins Rather Easily.

The muscular Ohio farm boy waded through his semi-final match with Dutch Schultz, Milwaukee German, without much trouble, but Rubi, the bare-footed bone crusher, was forced to the limit by Walter Wagner, Milwaukee star.

Although defeated, Schultz and Wagner still remain in the tournament as each entrant must drop two decisions before he is eliminated.

More than 50 wrestlers will participate in the tournament with the victor receiving a purse and an opportunity to meet the world's champion.

Stratton huffed and puffed as he attempted to floor Schultz for the first fall, and after 13 minutes of rough and tumble tactics. Referee Clarence Miller of Newark awarded it to Stratton when he disqualified his opponent. Schultz, sporting an impressive looking goatee, strangled and slugged to cause Stratton considerable trouble.

The Warren youth came back strong to finish Schultz off with a body slam in four minutes.

Nip-and-Tuck Bout.

The Rubi-Wagner affair was a nip-and-tuck tussle throughout. Rubi grabbed the initial fall with a body slam in 16 minutes. But Wagner rallied to even the match in seven minutes with a series of body bucks and a smother.

It took Rubi just four minutes to finish the New Yorker after the intermission. He turned the trick with an airplane spin and body slam.

Yak Clifford, Houston, Tex., and Joe Magyer, New York, battled to a draw in the 20-minute opener.—By Charles Martin.

2724 TOTAL HIGH IN CLUB LOOP

Scoring honors in the Club league last night were annexed by the American Legion, which came through with a 2724 total at the Meder alleys. Garrison of the Mansfield Savings Bank led the individuals with a 624.

Although defeated in three games by Tracy and Avery, the Liederkranz club retained the lead in the hot race. The Baku Grotto, which won two tilts from the Kiwanians, is one game behind.

1920-1925	California	50	4

GOODMAN DEFENDS TITLE

MEXICO CITY—(AP)—Omaha's Johnny Goodman, who hardly had a good afternoon's practice when he won the Mexican national amateur golf championship from Percy M. Clifford last year, tackles tougher opposition today when he defends the title against the "Flying Dutchman" from Dallas, young Don Schumacher.

After breezing through all opposition on the way to today's 36-hole final, these two appear all set for a real match.

Indiana May Dash Ohio Title Hopes

Coach Schmidt Rates "Hoosier Hurdle" Toughest Obstacle Remaining to Bar Buckeye March to Conference Honors—Irish Entertain Pitt.

CHICAGO—(AP)—The "Hoosier hurdle" may trip Ohio State's dash toward the Big Ten title next Saturday.

On the won and lost performance sheet, the powerful Buckeyes figure to mow down Indiana for a fourth Western conference victory before moving against Illinois and Michigan. Ohio State has whipped Texas Christian, Purdue, Northwestern and Chicago while dropping a one-point decision to Southern California. Indiana defeated Centre, Illinois and Cincinnati, being downed by Minnesota and Nebraska.

But the scores back of those performances by Indiana indicate the Hoosiers would be no pushover for any eleven. Minnesota won 6 to 0, but Indiana gave the Gophers a jittery afternoon. Nebraska won 7 to 0, scoring on the first scrimmage play and then was outplayed the remainder of the game by an eleven which doesn't know the word "quit."

"Shoot the Works."

Yesterday's drill by Ohio State indicates Coach Francis Schmidt of the Buckeyes is preparing to "shoot the works" against Coach Bo McMillin's team. It was a harder than usual Monday workout and the impression prevailed that Schmidt believes Indiana to be the toughest club remaining to bar the Buckeye march toward conference honors. Indiana came through the Nebraska game in good shape and yesterday worked on defense.

Purdue worked on offense plans for Fordham. Northwestern will have Quarterback Fred Vanzo back in the lineup for Illinois. The Wildcats took only a light drill on signals.

Illinois' second stringers went through a scrimmage which indicated Bob Zuppke may start Ralph Bennett, a sophomore, at fullback Saturday against the Wildcats. Bennet was impressive against Michigan which entertains Chicago. The Wolverines were given a rest in reward for their victory over Illinois and will be favored to win a third conference victory at the expense of the Maroons, who have yet to win a game this season.

Shows Effects of Loss.

Minnesota, opening preparations for Iowa, showed the effect of its bruising one-point defeat by Notre Dame. Iowa went through a light drill. Capt. Homer Harris, Erwin Prasse and Bob Lannon may be kept out of the Gopher game because of injuries. Wisconsin will be idle.

Notre Dame entertains Pittsburgh in the nation's standout clash. The Irish went through a long but light drill against Pitt formations. Coach Elmer Layden is worried about reserve strength, or lack of it, but was gratified with the news that Walter Marshall, regular guard injured against Navy, will be fit for heavy duty.

Don Heap Seeks Ball Toting Average.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Don Heap, captain of Northwestern's football team, has a great chance of winding up his collegiate grid career with an average of five yards each ball-toting attempt. Heap averaged five yards per try during his first two years.

He started slowly this season, his defensive play overshadowing his offensive performance. Against Wisconsin last Saturday, however, he gained 115 yards on 11 attempts, bringing his average for this season to the five-yard point.

16 Teams Keep Records Clean

Race For the National Title In Wide Open.

NEW YORK— (AP) —Heading into the November stretch, 16 major football teams still have eluded defeat, but the race for the mythical national championship as well as for the very real Bowl game nominations still is wide open.

Although the undefeated list, lacking the presence this week of Vanderbilt, North Carolina, Detroit, Auburn and Western (Colorado) State, adds up to 16, only seven of these have escaped ties. Here's the undefeated line-up of so-called major teams:

East—Lafayette, unbeaten, untied and unscored on; Pitt, Fordham, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Villanova, Yale, and Temple, all tied at least once. Mid-west—Nebraska, tied once.

Southwest — Baylor, unbeaten and untied.

South—Alabama, unbeaten and untied; Duke, tied once.

Far West — California, Santa Clara and Montana, all unbeaten and untied.

Rocky Mountain — Colorado, unbeaten and untied.

10,000 TO VOTE IN CITY TODAY, CHECK REVEALS

Less Than 15 Per Cent Visit Polls In First Four Hours Booths Are Open.

busy" but would get around to it "in time."

Next to the mayoralty contest, interest centered in the race for city solicitor, in which Herbert H. Schettler, Republican incumbent, opposes M. D. Ward, jr.

One candidate — Republican councilman C. N. Shultz — had nothing to worry about. He was unopposed in the second ward, a Republican stronghold.

Democratic supporters, who claimed that rany weather was their kind, had reason to feel cheerful during the mornnig. But Republicans, who are supposed to fare better when the sun is shining, had their cause to cheer at noon, when the sun began to shine brilliantly.

The News-Journal poll showed that the heaviest voting was taking place in the strongholds of both parties. In the second ward, which Democrats concede to the Republicans, 20 per cent of the vote had been cast in four hours. And in the fifth, which is as strongly Democratic as the Second is Republican, the same proportion held true.

Voters in every other Ohio city were going to the polls today, too, and experts in the office of the secretary of state, head man in elections, predicted that 2,200,000 Ohioans would mark ballots today.

Straws In The West.

Although the elections were strictly local, political prognosticators professed to see as straws in the wind.

Issues in the off-year election ranged from wet-and-dry contests in townships and villages to the mayoralty fights in the state's largest cities. Special levies were up for consideration in many cases.

Veteran politicians carefully scanned each race involving an incumbent, whether Democrat or Republican, to uncover a possible "trend" toward next year's contests, which involve the election of a U. S. senator, congressmen, governor and other state officers and the legislature.

Akron citizens balloted in one of the "hottest" mayoralty contests in years with labor's Non-Partisan league and the CIO making a strenous effort in behalf of Judge G. L. Patterson, Democrat, who opposed Lee D. Schroy, Republican incumbent.

Rival labor forces in Canton, Warren and other industrial centers intensified contests in those cities.

Hot Contest in Cleveland.

A spirited contest was waged at Cleveland where Mayor Harold H. Burton, Republican stalwart, sought re-election over John McWilliams. Cincinnatians voted for nine councilmanic posts under the proportional representation plan, which indicated the expected 150,000 voters would have to wait at least a week for a final tabulation.

Not quite half of Columbus' 132,147 eligible electors were expected to pass on the fate of 21 candidates and the 2.4 mill levy to maintain city services and care for the needy. Toledoans held their second councilmanic election since the city manager plan went into effect in 1936.

In New York City, under cloudy skies, 2,300,000 persons vote today in a bitterly contested municipal election expected to result in the loss of Tammany Hall's remaining places in the city government.

With only occasional intermissions, the Tammany machine has ruled New York for approximately 133 years. It was deprived of much of its power four years ago when the voters elected a Fusion mayor—Fiorello H. La Guardia.

La Guardia Due to Win.

There was every indication today that La Guardia would defeat the candidate of the Democratic machine, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, by a substantial plurality.

Tammany faced loss of the mayoralty for the second successive time, loss of the district attorneyship of New York county (Manhattan) and loss of its majority on the board of estimate, the upper house of the city legislature, which controls finances and patronage.

Last-minute odds on LaGuardia were boosted to 6 to 1.

LaGuardia's supporters predicted a landslide, with a plurality of between 500,000 and 750,000, while Mahoney's backers said their candidate would win by 450,000. Mahoney himself said that Democrats expected one of their "greatest victories."

Almost equal in interest and importance was the contest between Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey, the "rackets buster," and Harold W. Hastings, Tammany candidate, for district attorney of New York county.

Dewey, promising to "remove from the streets of New York the gangsters who would teach our children to do wrong," was 2 to 1 to win.

CIO Test In Detroit.

At Detroit, the Committee for Industrial Organization meets the first test of its political potency in a great industrial area today when Detroit's thousands of voters pass on a labor slate of candidates for municipal offices.

Voters will choose between a CIO candidate and an incumbent city official who received a belated endorsement from the American Federation of Labor, for mayor; They will select nine members of the common council from 18 candidates, five of whom are prominent in the affairs of the United Automobile Workers of America, a CIO affiliate. They also will select a new city treasurer and clerk, but candidates for these offices have neither the support nor opposition of labor.

Election officials, despite threats of rain and snow, predicted at least 450,000 of 625,000 registered voters would go to the polls.

The CIO supported for mayor Patrick H. O'Brien, former attorney general of Michigan. He campaigned, before the primary, on the plea to labor that it "march on city hall and take over the reins of government.

Opposing O'Brien was Richard W. Reading, present city clerk and veteran of 17 years in public office. Reading is supported by the Detroit and Wayne county federation of labor, but has insisted throughout his campaign that he is not aligned with them or any other group.

WINS PLACE IN AUDITION FINALS

Kathleen Anne MacIntosh, 16, Mansfield high school girl, will represent this district at the final Dick Powell audition at Public Hall, Cleveland Nov. 12 as the result of winning the regional audition here last night.

Miss MacIntosh, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. MacIntosh, 46 Hoffman avenue, will compete with regional winners on Nov. 12 for the privilege of singing as soloist in the Dick Powell programs which will be broadcast from Cleveland during the annual Auto show there Nov. 13-20.

The final winner also will be given a screen test by Warner Brothers and will win $100 in cash.

The Mansfield girl has a voice which indicates a lyric soprano as it devlops. Her audition number last night was "Indian Love Call" from "Rose Marie."

Her voice was judged the best of a group of 28 voices in last night's audition. Contenders, who had to come within an age classification of 16 to 25, were from Mansfield and a number of surrounding towns.

Miss MacIntosh plans to continue her study of voice as she hopes to develop an operatic voice. She has won places in two other voice contests; the Mansfield district solo contest for high school students last April and placed second in the state contest a month later.

Miss Leona Mawer, 18, of Galion, who has radio ambitions, placed second in last night's audition. She sang "Little Buckaroo."

HUNDREDS PASS BISHOP'S BIER

Impressive Rites Held Today For Galion Churchman; Close Friends Pallbearers.

Biehl, all of Galion and close personal friends of the bishop, whose stormy life was brought to a close by a cerebral hemorrhage early Sunday.

The scene in the study where the bishop's body rested before the funeral service was one of the most striking, both in beauty and simplicity, ever witnessed in Galion.

The bishop rested in a cathedral state casket of solid black walnut. His fair features and flaxen white hair contrasted with the rich garnet-colored chiffon interior. Over his feet a blanket of garnet colored cut velvet over white satin, was placed. The solid gold cross worn by a cleric, and also a clerical ring of solid gold mounting with amethyst stone, had been placed upon him.

Simplicity in arrangement of floral tributes was also impressive. There were two large white cathedral baskets with white chrysanthemums at each end, and one basket of yellow and white chrysanthemums in front of the casket. Over the mantel and back of the casket, a large six-foot spray of white lilies was placed. These floral tributes were from the bishop's personal staff, his representatives in Cleveland and New York, and his physician who has attended him for the past several years.

The many other floral tributes were placed in another part of the room.

HOLDS WIDOW HAS RIGHT TO COMPENSATION

Richland Jury Hears First of Six Cases Against Ohio Industrial Commission.

The right to participate in the state industrial compensation fund as the result of the death of her husband, Anton Smith, two years ago was granted Mrs. Helen Smith, Mansfield, yesterday by a jury in common pleas court.

Mrs. Smith had brought action against the Industrial Commission of Ohio after the commission had ruled that her husband's death was not due to injuries he suffered while employed by the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company.

The amount Mrs. Smith will receive will be determined by the commission, the jury ruling only on her right to participate in the fund.

The suit was the first of six against the Industrial commission which had been set for trial this week.

Five Others On Docket.

The others, scheduled for hearing during the three days beginning Wednesday, follow:

Charles and Glenn Tschantz vs. Industrial commission, for compensation for the death of Clyde Tschantz, who died from electrical shock Sept. 1, 1933, while employed by the city of Shelby. The plaintiff's were denied compensation on the grounds that they were not dependents.

John Southall vs. Industrial commission, for compensation for the loss of his right leg as a result of infection, allegedly caused by a foot injury suffered while employed by the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company. Plaintiff denied payments on the grounds that the amputation was not the result of his injury.

Mabel Lootens vs. Industrial commission, for payments for the death of plaintiff's husband, a farm employe, who was struck by a train near Shelby in 1933. Application ruled out by commission because the decedent's employer was not a contributor to compensation fund.

Ada Upson vs. Industrial commission, for compensation for the death of C. L. Ackerman, plaintiff's father, while in employ of city of Mansfield.

Annie Lucas vs. Industrial commission, for compensation for the death of plaintiff's husband, Henry Lucas, allegedly resulting from injuries suffered while employed by the Humphryes Manufacturing company in 1929.

FOOD POISONING VICTIMS BETTER

Lieut. Billings indicated the men would not be given treatments of anti-toxin, rushed here by army airplane from Kansas City.

He said the serum had been ordered as a precautionary measure when it was feared the men had been stricken with botulism, a form of food poisoning.

BROTHERS GROW SPECIAL ONION

PORTLAND, Ore. — (INS) — The brothers Arbini—John, Carl, James, Reynolds, Tony, Frank and Joe—are tearful leaders at Walla, Walla, Wash.

They work on the tear glands of the nation, not through any histrionic talents, but by producing the popular Arbini bermuda onion which reaches the market two weeks ahead of other popular varieties

For some strange reason, the Arbini brothers seem to be the only ones able to successfully grow their type of onion. Other growers have tried repeatedly to raise Arbini onions but without success.

Disaster Relief Director Will Address Rotary, Kiwanis at Leland Thursday.

Robert E. Bondy, national director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross, will address a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs at the Mansfield-Leland hotel Thursday noon.

Bondy, who headed reconstruction work, following the Mississippi flood in 1927, recently returned from a meeting of the International Red Cross committee in Paris and is expected to tell of his trip and outline the disaster relief plan in his talk here.

On the scene at most of the major disasters in this country in the past 10 years, Bondy has used the information and experience to develop a plan of preparedness, which, with the aid of the United States weather bureau, has enabled the Red Cross to supervise evacuation of threatened areas in time to prevent great loss of life.

The Rotary club will sponsor Bondy's appearance here and W. J. Locks will be chairman for the meeting.

THE STATE vs. ELNA JEPSON

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

(Copyright 1937)

CHAPTER IV.

"Yes," Curtis reiterated firmly. "He was a great and good man, great enough and good enough for any one to follow. But his recognized genius set him apart. Perhaps it would have been better if he had started life as a bricklayer, instead of winning prizes particularly from the cradle. That protection of genius enabled him to do whatever he willed—and he never willed an evil thing. But it made him think that every one else could also do exactly as he willed. But you can't. I mean you can't You can't do what you planned to do this afternoon because you are like him. His spirit is stamped upon you. You chose his way and now you've got to follow it."

Elna had not known that Curtis could move so quickly. The chair fell behind him. Instinctively she leaped to her feet. His strong arms were pinioning her, but there was neither pity nor affection in his eyes. His face was subtly changed, all the boyishness erased. His freckles showed in sharp outline against underlying pallor.

"You're failing the greatest man you or I shall ever know," he said at last in a voice of forced calm. "You're failing Oscar Jepson. You are a traitor to all that was finest in him. You may be an ignorant fool, but no power on earth need make you a weakling."

* * *

He released her so suddenly that she tottered, picked up the fallen chair and sank into it, her head in her hands.

"But, Curtis, you really don't know anything about it—" Her voice was pleading, tremulous.

"I don't have to know anything but this," Curtis said wearily, "that you, Elna Jepson, were planning to be a coward and slip out of the mess you've got into Plead guilty, would you?" His voice gradually regained its tension. "Well, I've known your father to do many a foolish thing—antagonize his clients, take on jobs because he liked them, when he knew he would lose money on them—but this I never knew him to do. I never knew him to quit a course, once he had decided on it, no matter what happened. You're Oscar Jepson's daughter, and you are not going to disgrace him, if I have to throttle you with my bare hands."

Suddenly Elna laughed. Curtis looked at her, startled. This was not the laughter of hysteria, but the laughter of release that wells from hidden sources, bringing its own strength with it

"I can't imagine anything the papers would like better than to have me throttled in jail between sessions of my own trial for murder," she gurgled.

From that moment Curtis knew that he had won. He took her cold hands between his own and chafed them gently.

"I know you thought you were going your own way without hurting anyone else, but sometimes it simply can't be done. If you had shamed your father by giving in just because you thought you were losing, you'd have shamed me forever. I'm only one person, but I don't believe you'd want to break even one person's entire faith, would you?" He had leaned his chair forward, but even so he spoke so softly that Elna, too, had to lean forward to catch his words.

"No, I couldn't know that, of course," Elna answered. "And I don't know yet how you happened to come so—so out of the blue, like those things at the end of Greek dramas, you know."

"That's easy." Curtis brought the chair down solidy on its four legs. "I was sent out of town. I didn't notice the papers. I was trying to straighten out an awful tangle of books, hunting for a suspected embezzlement. Talk about doing it with mirrors! I suppose the job, if I came through with it, meant a promotion—maybe a junior partnership in the firm. But you're not interested in all that."

"But of course I am!" Edna protested.

Curtis' submerged dimple came to the surface with his grin.

"You needn't be," he said. "I quit."

"You quit?" "You couldn't!" Edna cried.

"I quit it because I glanced at a paper one day and saw your picture in it. I couldn't just sit there wondering what sort of jam you were in, so I hopped the first train to find out. Nothing to be dramatic about—the job, I mean. I merely wired my boss for a substitute because I had to go to my dying mother. Hope you don't mind being my mother?"

Again he was rewarded by an unstrained responsive smile.

"It's quite all right—no martyrdom at all. Of course the boss knows I've been an orphan for years, but he'd know that was my way of saying it was important. And he's fallen into the bad habit of trusting my judgment. Oh, I almost forgot—I brought you down a defense fund." He extracted a bulging wallet from an inner pocket.

Elna took it in unresisting hands and turned it over and over.

"You thought I'd need money?" she asked

"Everybody in jail needs money."

"You came all this way to bring me this money?"

"No, my child, I could have wired it to you with sincere regret that business would detain me indefinitely But I knew if you ever got hold of real dynamite, you'd set off an explosion Oscar Jepson is dead; so it seemed up to me, that's all."

"I'll keep that for whatever life is left to me, anyway, "Elna said. "I may need the money and I may not. I would take it from you willingly. But the wallet itself I'll keep. I want to know one thing, Curtis When you came down here, did you believe me innocent? The truth mind you."

Curtis paused before answering.

"I knew it wasn't your way to kill anyone. But even if you did, you'd have marched right up and said so in the first place This last paper said you were about to break. Elna Jepson would not break. I was sure of it."

* * *

Elna's hands still trembled. She must make this ultimate question very clear.

"But now—now that you've read and heard more?"

"I don't think you did it, I tell you. I think you've made some terrible mistake—I don't pretend to know what kind. You're not always predictable, you know."

"Suppose I told you that my own defense testimony, under oath, will be a lie?"

"I don't care what your testimony is, except that I'm terribly afraid it may be high-minded and foolish, and utterly unconvincing. You have no idea what a poor liar you are. You simply have no gift for it."

Elna frowned at this bit of flippancy.

"But my testimony will be false, Curtis. Doesn't that matter? I don't like it. I'd get around it if I could. But the fact remains that if I testify at all—and I must—I'll have to lie ."

"No doubt you think you have to. It doesn't matter at all. I'm not interested. You must go on as you've started, that's the one important point."

"The way I started, "Elna repeated after him. "I didn't expect all that has happened. I expected something quite different. Not even my attorney knows whether I am guilty or not. I can't tell even you the truth."

Her eyes gazed into space, through the bars of the cell window.

"All the defense can do is to try to meet the prosecution circumstances, with other circumstances, enough for 'reasonable doubt,' perhaps. But I think we haven't enough Curtis. I didn't expect things to turn this way, but I honestly think I shall be convicted. But you're right. I began of my own will and therefore I must go on—go on as best I can to whatever end."

* * *

Curtis suddenly turned Elna about from the window and seized both her hands in a grip that made her fingers ache. He forced her eyes to meet his.

"Now I know you didn't do it!" His voice boomed with strange triumph. "There speaks Elna, daughter of Oscar Jepson. If I didn't know it for yourself, I would know it for him. You don't need to tell me anything. I know!"

"Don't be too sure. You haven't heard the evidence yet." Elna's voice was edged with irony. "And the lies I'll tell will be told to save myself if I can, not to shield anyone else from a crime. But you needn't be ashamed of me, whatever I say or do."

"It's the good fight that matters more than the winning of it, though I've a hunch that now we don't need to worry about saving you from yourself; bright ideas will crop up for saving you from the law. I'm proud of you." Curtis beamed upon her, unaware that there was anything curious in the moral sentiments that applauded a woman who admitted she might be guilty of murder and announced her intention of lying under oath in the efforts to save her own neck.

"Five minutes to two!" Jamieson's voice sounded from below.

Elna took the wallet from the table where it had fallen and extended it to Curtis. "Take care of this for me, will you?" The words were casual and natural enough, but he was alertly aware that this was the first time she had ever deliberately entrusted anything to him.

Inexplicably tired, he mopped his forehead, surprised to find it damp. An appeal for herself, for their old friendship, would have been futile. at that moment she could be reached through the strongest of all influences—her father. Curtis sighed inaudibly — a sigh of gratitude that he had seen the one way in time, that he had carried it through.

The moment of fatigue passed, leaving him almost jubilant. He was personally sure of Elna's innocence. Time had been gained. Therefore there would be time to save her. It was naive reasoning, but it brought back Curtis' normal state of energetic exuberance.

"Ready, Miss?" The deputy sheriff who guarded her in court rapped at the door.

CHECK THAT COLD IN THE DRY STAGE!

It's Much Easier Stopped in the First or Dry Stage Than in the Second or Third Stage!

A cold ordinarily goes through three stages.

(1) The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours.

(2) The Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days.

(3) The Mucous Secretion Stage.

A cold is twice as easy to stop in the first stage as in the second or third.

In fact, to let a cold run beyond the first stage may be to invite trouble.

The Thing to Take!

The preparation you want to take for all colds—any cold—is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets)!

Bromo Quinine tablets are expressly a cold treatment! They are not a "cure-all." They are made for colds and nothing else.

Bromo Quinine tablets are internal treatment and a cold is an internal infection!.

4 Effects in One!

Bromo Quinine tablets do four important things in the treatment of a cold.

First, they open the bowels.

Second, they check the infection in the system.

Third, they relieve the headache and fever.

Fourth, they tone the system and help fortify against further attack.

These four effects are what you want in a cold medicine.

Your Safe Bet!

Bromo Quinine tablets may be taken with confidence. They have been on the market for over 40 years and are the world's largest-selling cold tablet. That's proof of their character.

Bromo Quinine tablets now come sugar-coated as well as plain. Both kinds are sold by all druggists, a few cents a box.

When you ask for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets), insist upon getting what you ask for. It's your money you're spending!

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1937.

An artistic temperament is an expensive luxury.

When November gets under way, the "shopping days 'till Christmas" become surprisingly few.

Then there is also the good citizen who fully intended to vote today—except that he forgot to register.

Seventeen million Republicans are being asked to think—but why should such a painful process be confined to members of one party?

Choosing Public Officials.

MANSFIELD voters are giving a little time today to the task of going to the polls and expressing preference as to men who will serve as city officials for the next two years.

This is one of the duties of citizenship in a representative form of government, wherein the people delegate certain powers and authority to men or women in whom they have confidence. Their votes serve to express this confidence.

After the election is over, and when the results become known, Mansfield will settle down to continuance of its program of progress, in the belief that various departments of public business will be capably handled by officials employed for that work.

It will be well, however, for all citizens to evidence greater interest in civic affairs, thus encouraging officials to be alert in guarding the public interest, promoting good government and advancing community welfare.

Bishop Brown Passes.

NOT OFTEN, in modern times, has a stranger figure played a part in the drama of life than was Bishop William Montgomery Brown, who died at his home in Galion last Sunday morning.

No one who knew him will doubt the sincerity of Bishop Brown's beliefs, as expressed during the later years of his life—nor would anyone attempt to analyze the mental processes by which he became an ideologist after having long been an exponent of the tenets of the Episcopal church.

Except for a period of deprivation and hardship in boyhood, Bishop Brown was far removed from the practical, and was thus enabled to think much along the idealistic lines upon which he built a philosophy of life that was entirely satisfying to himself and which he sought to carry to others.

Attracted by the theory of communism, Bishop Brown obviously failed to recognize the impossibility of adapting an idealistic doctrine to the human imperfections with which it would be required to deal.

In the confines of his own beautiful home, or walking about its spacious grounds, Bishop Brown lived for many years in a dream world, with all people honest, industrious and intelligent, and all behaving in accordance with accepted rules of good conduct.

Bishop Brown lived his own life in an exemplary way. His philanthropies and charitable gifts were widespread in their intended benefits to the less fortunate.

It is no reflection upon the finite mind to suggest that it is as yet incapable of successfully coping with the problems of infinity. It was when Bishop Brown attempted to do this that he became less of a force for good to his fellowmen than he might otherwise have been.

The Business of Reading.

ACCORDING to librarians, business is good. Not their business so much as other people's. Libraries have the most patronage in dullest times. They reached an all-time high, for volume of reading, in the late depression.

It saddens them to see their circulation go down with an increase of general business activity; but fortunately it doesn't drop to its old low. Some of the depression benefit remains. People who, in sheer desperation, contracted the reading habit in hard times never quite get over it.

Librarians report also a change in the nature of the book demand. People are not asking so much, as they did during the worst years, for vocational books that might help them get and hold jobs. They are more inclined now to read books on the social sciences, travel, and—you'd scarcely believe this—speculative philosophy!

Lest there be any misunderstanding, it may be added that this doesn't mean philosophizing about stock speculation. It means taking an interest in problems that haven't anything to do with money-making, such as life, death, mind, soul, man's origin and destiny, and so on.

Don't Be An Easy Mark.

DURING a recent radio talk, a representative of the Better Business Bureau of Chicago pointed out that unscrupulous salesmen of various commodities, many of them worthless, were trying to persuade their potential victims to borrow on their life insurance to "invest" in the salesmen's wares. The Better Business Bureau speaker warned vigorously against falling for this bait, and advised: "Before you invest—investigate."

The title of his talk was, "Use Your Life Insurance Cash Value? Use Your Head Instead." That is first class advice. To reduce the value of the capital built up to provide protection for dependents and self-sustaining old age, in order to speculate in some get-rich-quick scheme, is the very height of folly. The public must constantly be on its toes to safeguard against the unscrupulous salesmen of phoney stocks, useless property and unworkable inventions who are always trying to separate the fool and his money.

Suspecting Neighbors.

THE SITUATION in Russia seems to have reached a stage like the "Terror" of the French Revolution a century and a half ago. It is not so bad in degree, but of the same nature. Red officials suspect everybody, and the secret police are ready at a moment's notice to arrest anybody. The prisons are said to be full of suspects and there have been many hundred executions, with or without trial in court.

The worst of it is that everybody is learning to suspect everybody else, and indeed is urged to do so. Andrei Vishinsky, chief prosecuting official of the Soviet government, asks every citizen to be on guard, considering every fellow-citizen as a potential enemy of the public weal.

Republican Obligations as 'Minority Party'

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Not a few Democrats are well disposed toward a Republican party revival.

I do not mean to say that any Democratic office holder is well disposed toward a Republican revival that will cost him his job. I don't mean to say that any Democratic congressman, for example, wants to see his own state or district go Republican at the next or some subsequent election.

But a sizable number of Democratic old-timers would shed no tears if quite a bunch of Democratic new-timers were to be beaten by Republicans in the nearest possible future.

They greatly prefer a Democratic majority on Capitol Hill; what they dislike is the present topheavy majority.

* * *

ONE VIEW OF IT

It is a political axiom that an overwhelming congressional majority is likelier to be a partisan liability than an asset, in the long run.

In 1928 the Republicans certainly won substantially enough.

The Democrats were depressed by their licking.

"And yet," the late Joseph W. Byrns (then a Tennessee representative and speaker of the house a little later) told me shortly afterward, "the bigger the Republican majority, the surer it is that it will get to fighting internally at the next session."

* * *

AS BYRNS SAW IT

"We Democrats," said Joe Byrns, "have principles. The trouble with us is that we have different sets of principles, and we quarrel over 'em on election day—and lose elections, accordingly.

"The Republicans have no principles to quarrel over at elections.

"They don't care whether they break in through the attic or the basement window. As electioneers, they'll agree on any plan, to get at the plunder.

"But they quarrel like fury over the loot, as soon as their paws are on it."

* * *

A "PAPER MAJORITY"

And so it happened.

President Hoover never did have a congressional majority he could depend on. He had a "paper majority," but 25 per cent of his own political folk were against his policies, in practice.

In the second half of his term he didn't have even a "paper majority."

A small majority has, for self-preservation, to stick together.

A huge majority disintegrates.

* * *

F. D. R.'S MAJORITY LARGER

President Roosevelt's majority has been huger than was President Hoover's.

Maybe, therefore, its disintegration has been more radical.

We shall see at the next extra and regular sessions of congress. And then at the following congressional elections.

* * *

REPUBLICANS LAX?

Another thing:

This country, it generally is agreed, needs two formidable parties.

One party must be in control. The other, however, must be a strong, critical minority.

All competent statesmen recognize this.

Well, it is the Republicans' job at present to be this formidable minority. It is a job which the Republicans have not been attending to recently.

A lot of far-seeing Democrats wish that it would do so.

It may seem paradoxical, but they wish it; they hope it will regain something of a fair balance.

Not that they want to be outvoted; they only want to be outvoted here and there, strictly within reason. And no one of them wants to be outvoted locally.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

How Much Should We Consider the Other Fellow's Feelings?

"IT'S ALL RIGHT, SO LONG AS IT DOESN'T HURT ANYONE ELSE"—

Since time immemorial we've used that slogan as a working rule for our personal ethics—and often disastrously. For countless mortals have resigned themselves to lifelong misery because they felt that the other fellow's fears or frets forbade any effort toward wider happiness.

Were they right? Should we cease our progress because of a mother's worry, a father's anger, a husband's or wife's peevish possessiveness? Or is each soul responsible only to itself and its God for its decisions?

Mrs. Faith Settle has set me wondering. Mrs. Settle is a cousin of mourned Amelia Earhart, and her letter contained a copy of one from Amelia's mother, a heart-broken wail of terror and longing for the lost girl. How could Amelia—how can anyone—risk personal adventure at the price of such anguish?—asks Mrs. Settle.

"CAN ANYONE GAIN PEACE OF MIND FOR HIMSELF IF HE DOES SO AT THE COST OF PEACE OF MIND TO THOSE WHO LOVE HIM BEST?"

A moving and, seemingly, a convincing argument. Yet just how fair is such a test, actually, of an action's morality? Suppose we apply it to life at large, from the very beginning of history—

Was there ever an adventure, however worthy, which was not viewed with terror or grief, resentment, envy or downright hate by the more timid, or the more conventional, or even the most loving?

Mothers have always wept . . .
Fathers have always raged . . .
The jealous have always sneered . . .
The orthodox have always viewed with alarm . . .

* * *

AND many a time these expressions of disapproval have sprung from the most sincere, even pious motives. But what would have happened if those motives had been considered?

Suppose Columbus had refused to sail because everyone thought him a fool? . . . Suppose Joan of Arc had gone back to her flocks when priests and warriors ordered her to do so? . . . Suppose Pasteur had ceased his experiments when they were declared sacrilegious . . . and Zola had given up his courageous fight for the truth . . . and Abraham Lincoln had put aside his pity for the slaves?

SUPPOSE CHRIST HIMSELF HAD TURNED FROM HIS MISSION WHEN HIS FRIENDS WEPT AND HIS RELIGIOUS SUPERIORS THUNDERED?

They all faced the tears and terror, the clinging and cursing of those they loved and respected . . . of those to whom they were bound by every mortal rule. Yet they went on! They could not stop—for they faced a higher rule than that of man.

WE WOULD STILL BE ILLITERATE SAVAGES SKULKING IN MUD DUGOUTS IF WE HAD STOPPED BECAUSE SOMEONE WAS SAD OR MAD. THERE WOULD BE NO GREAT ADVENTURES. NO SCIENTIFIC TRIUMPHS. NO IMMORTAL WRITINGS IN HUMAN HISTORY, IF DOTING MOTHERS, TIMID FRIENDS AND IRRITATED CONSERVATIVES HAD HAD THEIR WAY.

We MUST ignore sobs and sneers if we hope for progress. We CANNOT let "the other fellow's feelings" bar our path. With all tenderest regard for those feelings, they are, all too often, inspired by a peevishness or a cowardice which DOES NOT DESERVE CONSIDERATION.

Then how can we tell when the act we contemplate is worth the pain it will cost? We can't tell. But the record shows that there is a Power behind us which can tell . . . a Wisdom which, somehow, has always managed to show us the way—when we kept the signals clear.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL—

Congressional Opposition Disorganized.

OPPOSITION to President Roosevelt at the special session of congress, beginning Nov. 15, will be disorganized—yet it may be vehement, on the Democratic side.

The Republicans are having a fight of their own between the Hoover and the Landon conservatives, and between both groups of conservatives and the moderates. The liberals, while not backing the president on everything (they especially disagree with his neutrality policy) back him in his economic and social measures.

The anti-New Deal Democrats have been home and, despite the victory of a supposedly anti-New Deal Democrat in the Arkansas special election, find it more and more difficult to oppose the president on economic and social measures. They, however, will oppose him, probably under the tacit, or even open, leadership of Vice President John N. Garner.

The chief fight will be centered on the wages and hours' bill. But with the unemployment situation again developing seriously, senators who oppose this measure may themselves lose their jobs. A powerful lobby, however, will be on hand to "back up" the senators who oppose the bill—and, perhaps, to threaten them if they begin to wobble. It will, indeed, be a hair-raising session to some.

The main support of the president may come, not from a Democrat, but from a Progressive, Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. At the critical moment, as chairman of the senate committee investigating volations of civil liberties, he may bring forth a complete expose of the "vigilantes" and "citizens' committees," which came into being last spring and summer. It is certain now that the names of the contributors to these organizations, which resorted to violent methods against strikers and sympathizers of strikers, will be made public.

To a citizenry fearful of fascism, the acts of these organizations, as will be enumerated by witnesses, will react in favor of the new Roosevelt measures.

* * *

FARM BILL CERTAIN

A new farm regulation bill is considered certain. Any legislator from a farm region opposing it simply would be committing suicide. But the kind of farm bill will cause a row. The old-line Democrats desire outright farm subsidy without regulation. The president "won't stand" for this.

A farm bill, no matter what type adopted, will mean hardship for the masses in the end. Processing taxes and higher prices fall on the consumer. Furthermore, they act as a deterrent to consumption. Thus, finally, they offer no benefit to the farmer.

The farmer, of course, needs vast foreign interchange of trade. And he needs vast readjustment of earning power of the masses at home. In the meantime, he demands "shots in the arm"—which merely make more difficult the eventual and necessary readjustment.

* * *

REORGANIZATION

The bill for regional planning boards and the one for governmental reorganization seem likely to pass. They will eliminate waste—and conserve for the future. The cry of "centralization" against them has been the cry of all times against a tightening of management, whether that management be private or public.

* * *

ANTI-LYNCHING

The anti-lynching bill may stand a chance in the special session. There is a rumor in Washington that the anti-New Deal southern senators have decided to "permit" it to pass—and then use that as an argument in the south to capture state delegations from the New Dealers for the 1940 convention. Then—so the story goes—they could nominate a candidate of their own choice for the presidency. That sounds farfetched. They may find that the delegates would be New Deal in spite of being "hand picked." This is not a "hand-picked" age.

* * *

NOT ON THE ADDENDA

Much not on the addenda will be discussed, such as:

No. 1. Neutrality. A large bloc will insist that the president enforce the neutrality act. The administration evidently has some fears concerning this.

No. 2. SEC. Liberals may insist that the Securities and Exchange commission be made still more powerful. The recent break in stocks showed that SEC saved many small investors—but still not enough. There remains much hoodwinking going on in Wall Street—perhaps not purposely, but much still is put forth as truth which isn't. The Big Fellows get out in time.

No. 3. Food and drug act. For years efforts have been made to get a modernized food and drug act which would protect the public. Powerful lobbies always have defeated this. But a recent incident has aroused the public. A death-dealing drug was put on the market. Fifty or more persons died. Yet the federal food and drug authorities could do nothing—except seize the drug, wherever found, on the ground of "misbranding." And even that is stretching a point.

No. 4. Taxes. Changes in taxes are in the offing. If some are lowered others of necessity will be raised.

Sad Plight of American Shipping.

WASHINGTON—In all the hullabaloo over the marine labor union's blast at Joe Kennedy, chairman of the maritime commission, for his tirade against poor discipline aboard ship, it is almost overlooked that American shipping is getting the worst public sandbagging it has had in many a day.

The whole thing was set off by the uprising of the crew of the government-owned freighter "Algic" in Montevideo. In that South American port the crew for a time refused to handle the ship's cargo on the grounds that it would be delivered to a crew of strikebreakers hired during a Uruguayan longshoremen's strike.

Kennedy, who is no sweetie-pie executive, directed the ship captain to put the men in irons if they refused to work. It was a foreign port, and in such circumstances, in Kennedy's view, a strike amounted to mutiny.

* * *

Conduct Criticized.

WELL, the men went to work, the ship returned to Baltimore, its home port, and then was published the whole sorry business of disputes between the crew and the officers, which latter assertedly were not members of any seagoing union.

Kennedy accompanied the home-coming with a public criticism of the conduct of some American seamen at sea. Disobedience, indiscipline, lack of training, all contributed, he said, to a very unsatisfactory picture of the Yankee sailor afloat.

Following that, writers hunted out consular reports and other sources of stories of the poor performance of American seamen in recent years. Instances of unruly conduct at sea, especially in the Pacific trade, were stressed, to the exclusion of records of skilled and loyal seamanship. That sort of picture is not a good one to thrust before travelers, shippers, and insurance companies whose business it is to gamble on the prospects of a ship arriving safely with its cargo in good order.

* * *

Pay Lower.

AS FAR as American shipping is concerned, such "advertising" spells troublous days. If trade should fall off there will be less profit for the owners and less employment for the crews. The merchant marine in general will suffer and it will cost the American public a heavier subsidy than it now is paying to keep ships on the high seas.

Who is to blame is perhaps debatable, but it has been made a matter of record by senate investigation that pay of seamen has been scaled off since the war in spite of government payments through mail subsidy to keep the ships going.

Foreign competition is tough and the owners argue that they get no cargoes unless they haul cheaply, and low costs mean low pay.

The only immediate solution advanced also has come through the senate investigations. The remedy there suggested is simply for the public to pay enough into the kitty through subsidies so that seamen can be paid well and still allow operators a fair profit.

Timely Editorial

No Gas For Drunks.

The agreement among filling station operators of Columbus to refuse to sell gasoline to drivers who are obviously drunk is at least a recognition of a problem, even if it isn't the solution.

The drunken driver is undoubtedly one of the worst menaces to traffic. He not only lacks the mental and physical alertness necessary for safe driving, but is indifferent to the rights and safety of others.

If a driver is so plainly drunk as to be unfit for driving, more drastic action than merely refusing to sell him gas is needed. The police should be notified of the situation, so that if possible a cruiser may get on the trail of the driver.

The traffic record in Columbus is a calamity. Changing conditions entail a big job and will require co-operation from many quarters. The action of the filling station operators reveals a consciousness of a problem which affects every man, woman and child in the city.—Ohio State Journal.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

THOSE hiring foreign servants these days should confirm the references with great care. A Park avenue lady recently lost a Japanese servant who had been with her for years. He said he wanted to return to his native land to remain permanently.

A few weeks later another matron phoned her about the flattering references she had given the departing employe, who had just applied to her for a position. The first woman thought it odd, but decided the servant merely wanted to change jobs and was evasive.

Her husband, however, was suspicious. That was not like Oko. So he made an appointment to call on the lady and have the Jap admit him to the house. As he suspected, it was not Oko, but a complete stranger. He called in the police to straighten things out.

It developed the interloper was a professional thief and had bought the references. It was further learned that purchasing references is very common. Some of the foreign-born servants returning home for good make a tidy sum selling high class references to a shady agency.

Incidentally, there is a slump in Jap valets. Many have been called back to fight for their country in China. The Jap valet has long been considered a part of the gay bachelor's personnel and is also a symbol of the nouveaux riche. The first Jap valet in the memory of older New Yorkers was employed by Chauncey Depew in his young and dressy days. George M. Cohan has long had a Chinese valet known to all the theatrical profession as "Mike." It was George Broadhurst, I believe, who had a Filipino valet so excellent in his mimicry of actors that he was offered a booking over a vaudeville circuit.

The highly trained valets, such as those who serve the Vanderbilts, Goulds and Morgans, are as carefully picked as confidential employes in big enterprises or the diplomatic service. They necessarily know all the secrets and must be the sort who can be trusted. The majority are those who have had experience among the nobles of England or the Scandinavian countries. Not only are they linguists, but they must know the fine points of social etiquette. While their job may have a menial sound, they are far from menials. And their life becomes pretty much de luxe. When they travel they go on private yacshts, special train coaches and private airplanes. Off duty, they are not found at the movie or Coney Island, but at the Metropolitan art gallery, the various museums and the opera. Also, they are the most detached of household servants, rarely mingling with the others.

Somerset Maugham travels everywhere with his valet—the only literary figure I know so fortunate. He is such a capable and understanding Jeeves that for years he has selected every article of wearing apparel for his master. Being the same size, he also goes for the fittings of all the clothes. I have been told he is paid $100 a week, plus expenses and is in line for the discarded clothes which, of course, do not have to have the slightest alterations.

They say in Harlem that Bill Robinson has a quarter million salted in annuities against the day when his feather feet are no longer so nimble. The annuities were paid up about a year ago and the dancer is reputed to take only enough of his enormous salary for modest needs and the rest goes to worthy colored charities. He is especially interested in the young boys of his race in his home city, Richmond, Va., and is educating a number of them. Robinson is past 50 and his only extravagances are noisy shirts and ice cream. He admits that there are days when his ice cream consumption is a quart. Robinson's salary has soared to as high as $6,500 a week.

There are few who are not tap dancers at heart. The dignified gentlemen who take private lessons in the art would, I happen to know, surprise most folk. An expert always inspires envy. I have seen Pat Rooney II go through his routine a hundred times and I'd walk blocks any time any day to see him again. Twice in the past ten years I have made arrangements to master the tap, but when I get to the entrance way I somehow get suddenly took with one of my short of breath spells.

HARLAN, Ky.—(U.P.)—Harlan county was placed under martial law today following reports of election frauds.

Traditionally Republican, Harlan county voters today were voting for the first time in county history on a complete slate of Democratic local officials.

Authorities said they had received no reports of violence today but that charges of fraud had reached the election board.

There were reports from Black mountain and other districts that ballot boxes had been tampered with.

Being a superstitious sort of a chap, Carlton Fernyak, Republican executive committee chairman, was confident of victory today because of a black cat and a No. 13.

Just before he stepped into the booth at 2-E, he says, a black cat raced across his path. Then he was handed the No. 13 ballot. That's his lucky number, he says, and black cats have always brought his luck, so he just can't see anything but a Republican victory.

COAL DELIVERY BACK TO NORMAL

Drivers Continue at Posts Under 'Truce'; Negotiations Continue, Agent Says.

All remained quiet on the coal delivery front today as coal and building supply deliveries returned to a completely normal basis as the result of a truce called by a striking coal drivers yesterday.

Joseph Huntsman, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Chauffeurs, Teamsters, Stablemen and Helpers, local No. 40, who called the strike and blockaded delivery of coal and builders' supplies for four days said today that he had "not given up" trying to negotiate a working agreement with the dealers.

While no attempt had been made today by either side to re-open negotiations that collapsed last Friday, Huntsman said that he had talked to some of the dealers, but declined to reveal if anything had been agreed on.

He asserted that if he could not negotiate with them as a group through their negotiating committee, he would confer with each dealer individually in an effort to obtain signed agreements.

It is expected that within the next three or four months that there will be 100 to 125 boys in uniform in Galion. It is contemplated that there will be four and possibly five troops organized. There are now only 30 Boy Scouts here. In addition to these troops, the Boy Scout organizers plan to have two packs of cub scouts formed.

U.S. TURNS DOWN CUBA'S PLAN ON WAR MEDIATION

Carefully-Worded Note Points Out Non-Interference Policy In Spain.

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The United States today rejected a proposal of the Cuban government that this country associate itself with all the countries of the American continent in a joint attempt to mediate the civil war in Spain.

In a carefully phrased note delivered in Havana by the American Ambassador J. Butler Wright, the state department said it could not participate in such mediatory efforts because such action would defined policy of non-interference in the affairs of another country.

The note staid this government fully appreciate the concern of the Cuban government over the deplorable strife in Spain.

"The people of the United States have followed the progress of the unfortunate conflict in Spain with deep sorrow and the sufferings of the people of that country have profoundly distressed the government and people of the United States," the note said.

"It is the very earnest hope of my government, as it is of the American people that a peaceful method of terminating this strife may be found.

"The government of the United States, has, however, adopted, as a matter of principle, the policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of another country and with respect to the unfortunate conflict in Spain, my government announced in August of 1936 that 'n conformity with its well established policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of another country either in time of peace or in the event of civil strife, this this government will, of course, scrupulously refrain from any interference whatsoever in the unfortunate Spanish situation.'
